2008-09 ANNUAL REPORT
::welcome to Los Angeles!

The Los Angeles Convention Center proudly serves and advocates as a center where the sciences, arts, humanities, and social interaction take place at a grand scale in our great city. This fiscal year, the Los Angeles Convention Center became the first U.S. convention center and first Los Angeles city building of its size and age to achieve certification in Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design for Existing Buildings (LEED-EB) from the U.S. Green Building Council (USGBC). The City of Los Angeles is honored to have such an outstanding role model in the Los Angeles Convention Center as a World-Class center and as a leader in sustainability programs serving the local, national, and international community. Come and be a part of the LA experience.

A year whereby the LACC will be remembered for its Leadership and Innovation, the LACC completed this fiscal year having weathered the most unprecedented and challenging threat to its fiscal base and business continuity since its opening in 1971. A worldwide economic degradation impacting all industries, resultant build up of rhetoric damaging the meetings and events sector, increased competition and overall shrinkage of markets led to unanticipated levels of business and financial risk in the hospitality industry. Even traditionally strong markets like Las Vegas and Hawaii experienced double digit declines with an outlook of continued fiscal stress. Clients, venues and patrons alike considered the 12 months preceding July 1st, 2009 as one of the most difficult times in the recent history of our industry.

In the midst of such dire circumstances, the Leadership vividly portrayed by the women and men of LACC allowed this organization to rise above the challenges with a keen focus on LACC’s core financial competency and vision of success. Facing difficult challenges, LACC built upon its environmental legacy, delivered high levels of service, welcomed new clients, actively participated in various economic development and business sustainment and enhancement efforts, remained a highly regarded and effective business entity, identified new opportunities for revenue capacity growth, expanded the youth and education programs, supported the Sports and Entertainment District and, in essence, met the goals and objectives of every strategic initiative within its business agenda.

It is expected that once financial accounting and comparison of operations across convention centers is completed, LACC will be among the few, if not the only one, to end the year having completed so much while able to cover its operating expenditures through its revenues. This feat marks a historic fourth consecutive year that LACC is able to meet this paramount financial achievement.

In the 2008-09 fiscal year, the LACC hosted nearly 400 events while posting the highest hall occupancy rate of the past eight years at 72%. These events collectively generated $31.5M in gross operating revenues, the highest of the past eight years, and $26.5M in net operating revenues.

In the filming/photo shoot category alone, LACC experienced a 91% increase in the number of such events and a 103% increase in derived revenues related to this type of activity. I am particularly proud of our team having achieved such an increase, when due to higher occupancy we actually had limited space and time available for filming.

Among the hundreds of diverse events, the 2008-09 fiscal year saw LACC successfully host three Microsoft events, three electronic entertainment and video gaming related events, the Emmy’s Governor’s Ball, the Grammy’s Celebration, the Los Angeles Art Show, our signature event MusiCares Gala, the Los Angeles Auto Show, the Los Angeles Boat Show, the California Gift Show, and supported a multitude of other events here at LACC and at venues on the L.A. LIVE campus.
As various components of L.A. LIVE came on line, LACC’s position as an important business partner became more pronounced. The demand for our services in support of the Sports and Entertainment District provided us with an opportunity to constantly balance resources and needs while delivering results consistent with our vision. This has laid the groundwork for future joint endeavors that will result in great returns to the City.

The 2008-09 fiscal year will also be remembered as the year in which LACC, against all odds and financial pressures, achieved high marks in Innovation by receiving certification in Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design for Existing Buildings (LEED-EB) from the U.S. Green Building Council. This monumental accomplishment, in terms of environmental awareness and commitment, highlights the depth and extent of the LACC family’s capabilities, ambitions, and competitive spirit. The first City of Los Angeles building and the first convention center of its size and age to be certified brought an avalanche of positive and encouraging industry comments and media coverage.

Most important, the continued chain of environmental work that has now become intrinsic to LACC has resulted in other organizations seeking to align business objectives with environmental consciousness. The participation of over 200 elementary school students on Earth Day 2009 at LACC is one example of our message of environmental stewardship being conveyed loud and clear. This will be the true legacy of LACC.

As we close the 2008-09 fiscal year, we favorably welcome the upcoming fiscal year and are determined to continue to represent the best of Los Angeles before a regional, national, and international audience. I would also like to take this opportunity to once again acknowledge the monumental and selfless contributions of the LACC family of employees. Additionally, the support of the Office of the Mayor and the City Council was crucial to LACC’s success. I look forward in this next fiscal year to build upon LACC’s exemplary role in Leadership and Innovation.

Leading Environmental Change

In September 2008, the Los Angeles Convention Center (LACC) became the first U.S. convention center and the first City of Los Angeles building of its age and size to be awarded certification in Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design for Existing Buildings (LEED-EB) from the United States Green Building Council (USGBC). This feat was not easily accomplished and is attributable only to the relentless efforts of the LACC family of employees. This is a true reflection of the Mayor’s goal of making Los Angeles “the greenest Big City in the nation.”

Led by the proficient Green Task Team, LACC met all of the requirements needed to receive USGBC certification. Some of the programs included sensor-activated bathroom fixtures, newer energy efficient lighting, solar panels on the South Hall exterior, cooling towers that circulate cooled water throughout the facility, massive recycling efforts, diversion projects that keep waste from building up in landfills, and biodegradable food products. As a testament to LACC’s focus on environmental stewardship, our partners at the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Water & Power, and City Hall have awarded LACC with commendations for its serious and practical approach to “greening” the environment.

In addition to several new programs, the LACC also celebrated the launch of its annual EARTH AWARE, DOING OUR SHARE Earth Day Community event on April 22, 2009. During this event, local elementary and high school students learned about LACC’s earth-friendly programs and the practices that our City partners implemented to create a more sustainable environment.

LACC believes that in uniting its efforts and educating future generations during their formidable years, it can help minimize carbon footprints and increase the retention of natural resources.

increases energy efficiency. The Control Room’s improvements have created a greener LACC and increased the LACC’s energy and natural resource conservation efforts.

COOLING TOWERS
The newly installed cooling towers on top of LACC’s West Hall connect to chillers positioned underneath to re-circulate water throughout the 54-acre facility. They are more energy efficient and will preserve water and energy expenditures.

KITCHEN DISHWASHER
LACC’s main kitchen dishwasher was replaced with a more efficient machine reducing water consumption by 55%, resulting in an annual savings of 627,000 gallons of water!

COOL ROOF
The West Hall’s “cool roof”, a reflective surface that prevents the sun’s heat from penetrating the building, has dramatically reduced energy usage for air conditioning needs for the West Hall tower area.

“LACC Takes the LEED: The Los Angeles Convention Center has joined the ranks of centers across the country that are proving the steps they’re taking toward sustainability are working. It is the first Los Angeles city building to receive LEED-EB certification.”

The restrooms in West Hall were completely re-designed and modernized incorporating earth-friendly motion sensor plumbing and lighting fixtures. More than one million gallons of water will be saved annually due to the new water efficient urinals.

LACC’s “Get In Touch With Your Future” Youth and Education Enrichment Program provides intense, hands-on learning excursions, internships, and programs for students from Los Angeles and abroad.

Students are able to get a first-hand experience with divisions across the operational and business sides of the LACC as well as learn from show management clientele who offer site tours during select events throughout the year.

LACC’s Youth and Education Enrichment Program has grown so much that outside entities have taken interest and have begun either collaborating, supporting, participating, or endorsing the LACC’s Get In Touch With Your Future program. Some participants include ITT Technical Institute and the Greater Los Angeles Auto Show.

With the continued support of the Office of the Mayor and the City Council, the LACC will expand its efforts to provide services and resources for residents and visitors of Los Angeles. We anticipate that several of our new programs will attract pioneering conventions to the great City of Los Angeles and usher an innovative approach to Convention Center sales in the convention and entertainment industry. As centers and hotels experience an industry-wide decline in film bookings, LACC has seen a steady increase in site bookings made by leading production companies in the film industry.

The LACC aims to increase its environmental stewardship with the study of several initiatives, including a program that will save 1 million gallons of water per year, a thermal storage energy system (which will use chilled water stored the night before for the next day’s use), a zero-waste model, the installation of a reflective energy-saving white roof on top of the South Hall, and LEED-silver certification by July 2010.

As the combined entertainment campus encompassing the LACC, the STAPLES Center, the NOKIA Theatre, and L.A. LIVE continues to thrive, the Los Angeles of tomorrow promises to shine brighter than ever before.
